FORMER IBM EXECUTIVE WILLIAM M. ZEITLER JOINS BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF VETTE CORP

Portsmouth, NH (USA) May 14, 2009 – Vette Corp, a leading global provider of thermal management solutions, announced today that William M. Zeitler, recently retired senior vice president and group executive of IBM Systems and Technology Group, has joined Vette’s board of directors.

“Bill is widely respected for his roles as a visionary and industry leader in the computer and data center markets and we look forward to benefiting from his insights and experience as a member of Vette’s board,” said George Dannecker, Vette Corp CEO and president.

“Vette and IBM have been collaborating on thermal solutions for systems and data centers for quite some time,” said Bill Zeitler. “Vette is a clear leader in providing the kind of power efficient, space efficient, green technology innovations that today’s world needs. I feel privileged to join this exciting and dynamic team and look forward to working closely with George and the board during the next phase of Vette’s growth.”

Bill Zeitler retired as senior vice president and group executive of IBM Systems and Technology Group in August of 2008. In that capacity he was responsible for all of IBM’s systems, storage and microelectronics businesses worldwide. He was first named senior vice president and group executive of the Server Group in September of 2000.

Bill began his IBM career in 1969 as a programmer. He went on to work in a series of field assignments in systems engineering and marketing in IBM’s offices across the U.S. In 1989, he was part of the team that launched the AS/400. He went on to become VP of Strategy and Marketing for the AS/400 before being named AS/400 general manager. He held a variety of general management positions in the U.S. and Japan including head of World Wide Marketing and Sales for IBM's Software Group before assuming the Group Executive role in 2000.

Mr. Zeitler is a graduate of Gannon University in Erie, Pennsylvania, with a Bachelor of Science degree in Mathematics.
